

Currently our family listens to K-Love radio @ 89.7 FM. I have been advised that the FCC is currently looking at giving LPFM stations priority over translator stations like K-Love. I think that this could possibly reduce or eliminate these stations already in existence. When you live in rural areas of the country as we do, the opportunity to receive varied broadcasts are limited. K-Love provides solid Christian broadcasting 24-7. If K-Love's location was given to a LPFM station, this would eliminate the ability of our family to listen to the type of music and programming that we have come to appreciate. We are financial supporters of this station to assist with the costs of broadcasting this signal into our community.

I strongly suggest that you do not change the system that is currently in place. You would be trying to fix something that doesn't need fixing. Leave the translators alone.
